BUILDING A HABIT:

There are many different reasons for drinking. How did drinking come to play such an important part in your life? Let us take a closer look:

- 1. Drinking is a learned behavior
 - You learned to drink
 - Drinking alcohol is not a natural act
 - Did you get sick or nauseated at first
 - Through practice and desire to learn you did learn to drink
- Your perserverance conditioned your body to expect the assault of alcohol
- 2. Drinking to fill a special need
 - You felt out of place in a crowd who drank
 - You drank to get courage
 - In time you became conditioned to using alcohol
 - Each time you drank you strengthened your habit
- * You didn't think about it, you were not aware of any reason for it, you just did it.
- 3. As time passed your drinking was adapted to other situations
 - To relieve tension or anxiety
- Each time you drink in one of these situations you strengthened your habit
- 4. Drinking is a triggered behavior

The thing to notice about this drinking habit is that it does not function in and of itself. The trigger may be:

- Being happy or sad, tired
- Celebration of an event party situation
- Anger, family crisis
- * Triggers can be any number of things, and bad feelings
 - different people have different triggers.
- 5. Drinking is an automatic behavior
 - Drinking can be very automatic
 - You may open a can of beer and have one already open
- You might stop at a liquor store to get booze, and yet have a stockpile at home
 - You may be offered a drink, without thinking reach for it

Student Health Center

The following information was submitted due tot he increase number of diagnosed cases of "Pinkeye" or conjunctivitis on campus.

Conjunctivitis is the infection or inflammation of the thin membrane which covers the eyeball and lines the inside of the eyelid. Conjunctivitis is more commonly known as "pinkeye".

The most common causes of conjunctivitis are bacterial, viral or allergies. Generally, only bacterial or viral conjunctivitis are contagious. Conjunctivitis or "pinkeye" spreads easily among children and families.

The common symptoms of pinkeye are:

- mucus like or clear discharge from the eyes
- redness and swelling around the edges of the eyelids
- itching, soreness, and/or a feeling that something is in the eye
- eyelids stuck together ... especially upon waking.

The sticky discharge on the eyelashes/eyelids needs to be washed off. Use lukewarm tap water. Use a fresh cotton ball each time you wipe. Wipe gently from the inner corner of the eye (nearest the nose) to the outer corner of the eye to avoid spread of infection. Do not rub, wipe gently.

For the toddler and baby, wiping the drainage away frequently will help. Remember to wash your hands also to prevent the spread to other family members. Keep the child's hands clean and fingernails short. Remind the child not to rub eyes. For the small child, put clean white socks or mitts on hands at night.

Pinkeye is highly contagious. Try to reduce the contact of infected children with others. Change wash cloths, towels and pillowcases daily. Towels and other objects used by the infected child should not be shared with others until the infection has cleared up. Keep the child out of school until the eye drainage has subsided. Good hygiene is a most important part of caring for the child with pinkeye.

If your child has any of the symptoms mentioned above, please seek medical attention for the child. The earlier the child is treated with medication, the earlier he can return to daycare or elementary school. Pinkeye will usually clear up in 10-14 days, sooner with medication. Medication such as Neosporin or Gentamycin drops or ointment may be prescribed.

NOTE: Daycare, Elementary & Nursery policy states that a child diagnosed with pinkeye or conjunctivitis is not allowed to return to school until the child has been on medication for 24 hours. The Sick Child daycare does not allow children diagnosed with conjunctivitis or pinkeye until the child has been on medication for 24 hours due to the possible spread of conjunctivitis to the child who is already ill.
