- ★ THE DAYS OF OUR TRIBES - . . . A continuing soap opera

"Sorry" . . . "Going home to the Rez "that weekend" . . . "Already got a partner" . . . "No"!! The doors shut, and eyes were batted a s looks of discouragement showed on the face of Cactus and Turnip. Each drew a deep sigh as they wandered to the library. Unwilling to give up, they shuffled through the albums for music to practice with . . . when as quickly as someone drew lightbulbs over their heads, they looked at each other and they realized their idea was the same!

They were staring at the last album on the shelf. PEE WEE Herman's self-teaching dance album for all ages. Checking it out they ran to the recreation for a record player and privacy from the watchful eyes of their competition. The beat was lively and the dance steps easy to follow; but Cactus seemed to miss-step and fall all over Turnips toes. Not being the fancy dancer that made Turnip easy and light on his feet; Cactus plodded along shuffling in his old tattered boots. In pain, Turnip wondered if this was such a good idea when a loud voice shouted, "What's going on here?" They turned to see Coach Six standing at the door, hands on hips with a look of bewilderment
