NEWSLETTER

NOVEMBER IS NATIVE AMERICAN RECOGNITION MONTH AT UNITED TRIBES TECHNICAL COLLEGE, BISMARCK, N. D.

There will be a series of activities, programs, and special projects at the United Tribes Technical College and Theodore Jamerson Elementary School during November of 1989.

These activities are the celebration of November as Native American Recognition Month. Other colleges in our state celebrate Native American Day or Native American Week, but it seemed appropriate for us, because we are a Native American school, that we spend more time celebrating and exploring our heritage.

It seems particularly appropriate that November be the month selected for Native American Recognition because during November, we celebrate Thanksgiving, and THIS November, we will be celebrating North Dakota Statehood Day on November 2, 1989. What better way can we show thanksgiving for our uniqueness and our progress than to celebrate for a month by having speakers, etc. who will address issues of special concern and interest to us? And what better way can we emphasize that we are an important part of our state than to have Native American Recognition during the month North Dakota celebrates its anniversary as a viable part of the United States of America?

Activities celebrating Native American Recognition Month will be announced every week in the NEWSLETTER.

DID YOU KNOW? DID YOU KNOW? DID YOU KNOW? DID YOU KNOW? DID YOU KNOW? DID YOU KNOW?

"DID YOU KNOW that JOHN BEHELER, one of the instructors at Theodore Jamerson Elementary School is a "published" artist? Tipi Press in South Dakota will be printing a 1990 calendar featuring John's beautiful art work, and Dr. Allen Ross's book, MITAKUYE OYASIN: "WE ARE ALL RELATED", copyright 1989.

(John is the "moving spirit" behind the Medicine Hoop Art Club, which began in October. All children and adults on campus who are interested in joining this art club are cordially invited to do so. Meetings are every Wednesday night at 7:00 PM.)

The following are excerpts from a writing exercise completed by Business Clerical students for English 104. Using their pens to print the images of their minds, the students wrote their sensory perceptions of October 13, 1989, UTTC Cafeteria picnic grounds.

"I hear the world getting ready for another change...I will call this a luke warm day....every leaf that falls is one of my thoughts....today tastes like a sweet and sour drink...I feel free like an eagle flying high, at peace with myself....the memory of the leaves is almost gone....a lazy day....today feels like the type of day for me to be alone....a very colorful day....a day to never forget....the feelings of today have brought me happiness, joy, and peace within myself....you can hear the city of Bismarck in full motion and UTTC in slow motion because it's Friday....today will be a sweet memory a couple of years from now....this kind of day brings all the nice memories I had at home about this kind of day....today is a peaceful day, like a pumpkin pie....today tastes like a cold cherry icicle pop.... today is a day to make magical wishes....the breeze blows away all the worries....today is unique....I hear the trees telling me to be alert and the wind saying to avoid danger....I hear the children warning me to be careful....I feel the coldness of an attitude and the unnecessary comments....today tastes like a lemon you eat without salt, it is hard to swallow....

On October 27, 1989, the following "Sermonette" by Deacon Ed Johnson, Chaplain at UTTC, was featured in the BISMARCK TRIBUNE. The feature is reprinted with permission:

People need to help each other in any way possible

By DEACON ED JOHNSON, Chaplain at United Tribes Technical College

There are so many hurts in the world today. Every time we turn on the TV, read the newspapers or just talk to someone we hear of hurt feeling, we are shocked as we see accounts of crime, acts of violence, child abuse, and the list goes on.

It's becoming harder to find a decent movie to take the children to anymore that doesn't have violence or swearing in it or to watch TV without violence. In the last few years we have watched thousands of farmers lose their land, land that had been in the family for years. The killing of so many unborn children in this world is enough to make you sick. With the way the world is today, no wonder we hear of so many suicides and unbelievable acts of violence.

There are so many hurting people that we need to reach out and touch them. By a phone call, a visit, a helping hand or even just a hello on the street. After all, we are all brothers and sisters in Christ.

Jesus Christ is a friend who will stick with us in times of trouble. He shed his blood for us and by it we are redeemed. Set free of guilt and pressure from everything that Satan tries to put on us.

Live in the love of Jesus, every day of your life. And know that he is able to see you through any trial or problem you face.

When we realize God's love for us — well, that's when we can say, "Blessed are the poor in spirit, blessed are the meek, blessed are those who mourn." These statements from the beatitudes can be made because they are full of God's vision, with God's love.

Nothing — not poverty, loss of position or loss of loved ones — can separate one from the love of God. Let's do our part by getting out and touching someone.
