LOOK TO THIS DAY

from the Sanskrit

Look to this day
For it is life,
The very life of life.
In its brief course lie all
The realities and verities of existence:
The bliss of growth.....
The splendor of action.....
The glory of power.....
For yesterday is but a dream
And tomorrow is only a vision.....
    BUT TODAY, WELL-LIVED
    Makes every yesterday a dream of happiness
    And every tomorrow a vision of hope.
    LOOK WELL, THEREFORE,
    TO THIS DAY!

Teen learns driving drunk isn't worth it

Dear Ann Landers: I am an 18-year-old from Vancouver who has something important to say.

This morning when I got up I had a splitting headache. Hangover would be more like it. Through bleary eyes I saw a sheet of paper on the floor that looked as if a 3-year-old had scribbled on it. I picked it up and discovered it was something I had written last night after I got into my car to drive myself home from a party. The message was this: "You have no business driving. You are dead drunk. I hope you make it home alive." I had signed my name.

Weird? You'd better believe it. Although I'd had a lot to drink at the party, I remember saying good night to a lot of people. I'm sure many of them were just as drunk as I was. But there must have been somebody there who could see what kind of shape I was in. Why didn't anyone have the good sense to take the car keys away from me and drive me home? Why was I allowed to get into my car, boiled to the eyeballs, and get behind that wheel?

You have published many letters about drunk driving, but somehow we have to make people aware of how real the danger is. They must realize that a drunk driver can kill himself and murder a carload of innocent people.

Thank God I made it home all right. It's a damned miracle. I don't remember a single thing that happened after I said goodnight. But one thing is certain. That experience scared the living daylights out of me. I will never again drive drunk.

Please, Ann, print my letter. I owe it to the world to get behind this crusade because I was — One of the Lucky Ones

Dear Lucky: Thanks for saying it better than I could have. I hope this column is reprinted in school papers all over Canada and the United States. Send me clippings, students.
