AIHEC honors outgoing director

POWWOW CEREMONY: The outgoing director of the American Indian Higher Education Consortium was honored during the organization's 27th annual conference in Bismarck. Dr. Gerald Gipp (Standing Rock Lakota), at center with blanket, was recognized March 17 with an honor song during the conference powwow. Colleagues, friends and relatives filed past to shake hands with Gipp and other tribal college leaders. Gipp will retire June 1 after more than seven years as AIHEC's executive director and an extensive career in American Indian education. AIHEC conference results and photos inside.

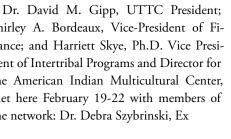

UTTC joins Faculty Resource Network

First Tribal College to belong

BY HARRIETT SKYE, PH.D., VP of Intertribal Programs

NEW YORK (UTN) - United Tribes Technical College has joined the New York University Faculty Resource Network, an awardwinning professional development initiative whose mission is "to foster connection, collaboration, and collegiality through a partnership of colleges and universities dedicated to faculty development."

Shirley A. Bordeaux, Vice-President of Finance; and Harriett Skye, Ph.D. Vice President of Intertribal Programs and Director for the American Indian Multicultural Center, met here February 19-22 with members of the network: Dr. Debra Szybrinski, Ex

Dorgan vows to keep pushing for Indian health care

MOMENTUM: North Dakota U.S. Senator Byron Dorgan and several dozen supporters rallied February 27 in Washington, D.C in support of the Indian Health Care Improvement Act. The measure was authored by Dorgan and passed a day earlier by the full Senate. Dorgan, who chairs the Senate Indian Affairs Committee, pledged to keep pushing until the bill reaches the President's desk. "This is a big step forward for Indian health care," he said. "This... will help put an end to health care rationing and move the health care system in Indian Country in the right direction." Photo by Brenden Timpe, Dorgan

KODA THE WARRIOR

"Thoughts and Actions of a LEADER"

CREATED BY MARK L. MINDT SPIRIT LAKE NATION

Training Your Mind

Most men fail not because they aim too high, but because they aim at nothing.

Think like people of action; act like people of thought.

The only real limitations we encounter are those which we place on our own minds.

Go into a game believing you are going to do your best- then do it!

The self-motivated man is one who has developed more of the God-given potential all of us possess!

All men are created with an equal opportinity to become unequal!

You are where you are because of the dominating thoughts that occupy your mind!

Do It Now! Nothing is successful until it is accomplished.

If a man never fails, it may be because he never tries.

Set your goals high. If you aim for the gutter, that is where you will end up.

Luck is what happens when preparation meets opportunity.

Success is a journey, not a destination.

It's better to get ahead then to get even.

First student enrolled under military spouse initiative

BY RENEE BECKER, Exact-Med Transcription Training Program Director

The Exact-Med Medical Transcription Program has enrolled its first student under an educational program for active military spouses. The referral came in February from "Life Transformed," a nonprofit military organization that assists active military spouses in educational training.

For students who choose to enroll in Exact-Med, a $1,500 Department of Labor (DOL) grant is applied toward the student's unpaid tuition when the student reaches Phase Three of the program.

However, to support the military effort, spouses of active military also receive an additional DOL incentive of $700 to cover the cost of the books.

The DOL, Department of Defense, Medical Transcription Industry Association, and Life Transformed have partnered to market the medical transcription industry to military spouses. Due to the flexibility and portability of this career, it works especially well for military families who relocate every few years.

The DOL program is scheduled to run through November 2008.

Makwa poetry resonating with Native People

BISMARCK (UTN) - When Niizh Makwa finished a talk with students in a Native American literature class at United Tribes Technical College, he got a hug from one young woman and firm handshakes of appreciation from others. Another young woman from his own tribe, Turtle Mountain Band of Chippewa, lingered until all had drifted out of the classroom to tell him what she thought about his poetry.

"A lot of Natives have poems inside of us but most of it doesn't get written down. They don't share them with anybody. They never get heard," said Theresa Wilkie, a student in the college's Computer Information Technology program. "But yours - people are reading these. They're going to hear and understand the pain we go through. I appreciate what you've done. I can't wait to get the book and show my family."

Makwa's book is "Red Man's Diaries," a slim paperback that came out late last year containing 50 of the more than 5,000 poems he has written over the past 15 years or so. The verses contain powerfully worded, unvarnished depictions of historic and contemporary relations Indians have with mainstream society.

Don't tell me you can relate to my troubles or that you know me now that you rented dances with wolves don't tell me that we could get along if we could just forget yesterday

& don't give me your pointers on how an Indian should live today.

Don't stand there & tell me to reach for opportunity don't talk about the 'programs' out there for people don't act like you know me - my life is not a you could never fathom what it's like to be me.

-from DONTTELL ME

The work resonates with tribal people. Theresa Wilkie described it as "comforting" to know that you're not the only one who is feeling the pain.

On a cold Saturday in February at a Bismarck bookstore all copies sold out before his book signing was over. He said a woman elder from Standing Rock was so excited that she nearly "busted down the door" to get in to meet him.

"I've had people cry when I read them," Makwa said. "And I've had non-Indians get up and leave."

In short, the response is bigger than he Niizh Makwa is the poet's Ojibwe name, which means Two Bears. Also known as L. Joseph Belgarde Jr., he was born in 1978 and raised in North Dakota on the Turtle Mountain reservation. He is a single parent and now lives in Bismarck.

Makwa allows that his poetry is harsh and that it will offend some people. He describes it as fierce and strong - in keeping with his mission as a warrior poet - to "remind people of the reality that's out there" for Indians.

At United Tribes, he read softly from his poems and answered questions. He said he continues to compose new works that he handwrites into notebooks and tries to keep up with the almost overwhelming amount of e-mail he now receives. He commended the students on their commitment to getting an education and thanked them for listening and asking questions. And he said he is planning a tour that will kick off in North Dakota.

Theresa Wilkie's closing advice to Makwa: "I'm really glad this book is out there. Keep writing. Keep pushing 'em out. Cause you're doing a lot of good."

"Red Man's Diaries" is published by Publish America, Baltimore, MD. It is available through the publisher (www.publishamerica.com), Amazon Books, Target, and the Bismarck Barnes & Noble.

Student Theresa Wilkie thanks poet Niizh Makwa following a class visit at UTTC.

Future Special Education Teachers had help

BY LISA AZURE, UTTC Teacher Education Director

A cohort group of student teachers are in the process of completing the first phase of their final requirement in realizing their goal of becoming Special Education teachers. Upon completion of two semesters of student teaching, these students will graduate from Sinte Gleska University and be eligible for South Dakota Certification in Special Education and Elementary Education.

Attaining this goal has been made possible through a partnership agreement with Sinte Gleska University, Mission, SD, and funded by an Office of Special Education grant administered by UTTC.

A special thanks to the cooperating teachers who guided them through this final requirement.

The student teachers and their cooperating teachers are:

- Tammy Kelsch (Three Affiliated) cooperating teachers Colette Fleck and Laurel

This poem in the form of a tree is a Native American Literature class assignment by Aja Baker (Three Affiliated). In a concrete poem the words are arranged in an attractive and meaningful way. In addition to stimulating thought and discussion, the activity is a form of language preservation and revitalization, according to instructor Brian Palecek.

Day-in-the-Life of a Shoe

By David Black Cloud (Standing Rock), Art/Art Marketing

So, I was thinking to myself, "Why you gotta go stepping in a puddle when you got legs, Man?" Humans! Am I right? I mean it's not like he doesn't have legs to step over the puddle. I don't want to sound like a whiny crysack, but c'mon. It's all I can do to get him to wash his feet and clean his socks. What's a shoe to do? Alright, in his defense, I will say this much about him, he's got style. Or rather, he's got the style I give him. Ha! But you know, there was this one time, when he went swimming with his girlfriend. I got to be poolside with the sweetest pair of sneakers you ever did see. She was a nine for sure! Yep, so fresh and so clean, with laces that were fat – I mean F-A-T! Gotta love them fat laces. And there was this other time we went to the gym and worked out. It was heaven. The shoes were athletic and slim, put a little bounce in my soul, you know? Anyway, just another day in the life of a shoe, right? I'm lucky, after all, I mean I go everywhere with this guy. Just not loving this squish right now.

Note: This piece of creative writing was a class assignment, by English Instructor Jeanette Martin, to craft a paragraph from the perspective of a shoe.

An Honor to Serve

"I would sincerely like to thank Dr. David Gipp and United Tribes Technical College for the service award presented March 18 to me at the AIH-EC banquet. It was a real surprise and a great honor to be recognized. I received a beautiful star quilt that I will always treasure. In more than 34 years at the college I have seen many positive changes and great progress that contributes to the success of UTTC students today. It's a joy to be part of it."

Why I Will Succeed

My path through college

By Joshua B. Logg Jr., UTTC Tribal Environmental Science Student

When I started classes at United Tribes Technical College in 2006, I was seeking to fulfill one of my life's goals. I've been trying to earn a college diploma for quite awhile. I've been working at this before and came away empty. This time it's different.

My first time was at Black Hills State in 1980-81 and it was a huge failure. I don't know how I lasted even one year because I hardly ever went to class. I didn't do the work or take the tests and I was kicked out of two dorms. To me, it was one big party. The only time I showed up was when I was sober and that didn't happen very often. I ended up on academic probation after the first semester because my GPA was 0.50. The second semester was no better and I didn't return.

My second attempt at higher education was at the University of South Dakota in 1987-88. I made a few adjustments but never tried as hard as I could. I did just enough to get by. My GPA jumped to a whopping 1.76. But I didn't return the following year because I married and went back to work.

My third try was at Si Tanka University in 2001-02 and 2004. I made an effort to apply myself academically this time. I commuted 492 miles each week attending classes while working at the post office in Mobridge, SD. I was a single Dad, holding a job, going to school and raising a family.

Even with all that, I'm proud to say that my GPA was 3.78. And I would have graduated but to my disappointment the college ran into funding difficulties and closed.

Now I am here at United Tribes. I was inspired to come back to school following the death of my former wife. I am older and wiser now. I am sober and I have the right attitude. I am determined to graduate this time with an Associate of Applied Science Degree in Tribal Environmental Science. I believe that earning a college degree will tell the world that I am someone who sticks with it until I succeed.

Joshua Logg is a member of the Cheyenne River Sioux Tribe. He is a military veteran who served two stints in the U. S. Marine Corps. He is on a track to graduate from UTTC in December 2008.

I believe in what the great boxer Muhammad Ali said: "Inside of a ring or out, there ain't nothing wrong with going down. It's staying down that's wrong."

I will be the fourth Logg to graduate from United Tribes Technical College and I hope my children will follow this path and graduate from here too.

Thank you to all who have helped me along the way!

CHILD DEVELOPMENT CENTERS

Progress Report

BY LISA AZURE, Child Development Centers Director

Much progress has been made in reorganizing the three childcare centers at United Tribes Technical College. A little over a year ago administration of the program was transferred to the Early Childhood Education Program in the college's department of Academic, Career and Technical Education. A lot of good things have happened.

strengths and developing a strong program!

I submitted a proposal to the U. S. Department of Education in March titled the "Prairie Rose Project." It is a language and literacy development opportunity for children ages 3-4. I am hopeful that it will be funded as it would provide training and appropriately, monitor development and measure gains. We also completed dental screenings with the help of personnel at the Student Health Center. 'Thank you' to Sheri Baker and the health center staff for working with us! We are pursuing resources for vision screenings, as well.

I would like to extend an open invitation for people to visit the centers. Let me know and I will provide or arrange for a tour. During an open house for UTTC employees last fall I learned that many people had never been in any of the centers.

United Tribes and the parents can be thankful for the dedicated employees who are making a big difference at the Child Development Centers!

Indeed, it's good to know about your progress! The Early Childhood Centers have always been the talk of everyone who visited or graduated from UTTC. Putting an effective curriculum and staff and implementation program together is no easy task. I appreciate your work and that of each of the directors, staff and parents. I know for a fact that all are doing their jobs effectively, sensitively, and with great care for the young ones entrusted to them. These youngsters are truly the future if Indian America and they deserve the very best we can do.

Pilamayaye!

Barb Strikes the Enemy has started off very well as the new director for the Preschool. Lori Brown, Infant-Toddler Center director, has been terrific in assisting Barb, the same as she did with Carol Nichols. Carol has been directing the Children's Dwelling for the past 6 months. These three are working together very effectively as a team; building on each other's materials for the families and center personnel on ways to enhance literacy skills in the area of pre-reading.

The centers are all fully staffed with nearly 40 employees. The curriculum is in place in all three buildings although it continues to evolve and improve, particularly in the Children's Dwelling with the twoyear olds. We are completing assessments on all of the children so we can plan more

Every Day Is A Great Day To Thank Your Child Care Provider!

Your child's caregiver or teacher makes a positive impact on your child each and every day, and any time is always the right time to say thank you.

United Tribes Hosting One-Day ServSafe

Experienced foodservice managers, teachers and others interested in professional food safety certification are encouraged to participate in a one-day ServSafe class hosted by United Tribes Technical College's Land Grant Extension program on April 29, 2008.

The class is a review and study session for the National ServSafe Exam. Participants are urged to register as soon as possible so they can read ServSafe Essentials Fifth Edition prior to the class. Call immediately to reserve a space. The class size is limited to 25. The $115 fee includes the book and exam fee.

UTTC food safety educator, Pat Aune is the instructor. Since 2004 she has taught this food safety course to foodservice managers and workers, meat inspectors, environmental health specialists and teachers. For registration information contact Pat at 701-255-3285 X1399 or e-mail paune@

MAKING SMART CHOICES

- Always use a shopping list. Planning your menus in advance will make it easy to create the list.
- Try to shop when you are not hungry. This will help you avoid unplanned purchases.
- Compare national brand's sale price with store brands. Both are often on sale at the same time.
- Compare the cost of convenience foods with the same foods made from scratch.
- Oftentimes, convenience foods cost more than similar foods prepared at home.
- Take the time to compare fresh, frozen and canned foods to see which is cheapest.
- Buy foods you like when they are on sale and in season.
- Buy products when they are on sale for later use.
- Stock your kitchen with time savers that are packed with nutrients! Look for fat-free, low-fat and low-sodium items and get foods that you can make and serve in a hurry such as:

Canned or Frozen Fruit Canned or Frozen Vegetables & Beans Whole-grain Bread or Crackers Canned or Frozen Meat, Poultry & Fish Enriched or Whole Grain Pasta

Canned Soups or Stews

Enriched or Brown Rice Cheese

- Prepare enough for another meal so you have leftovers. For example, serve a baked chicken one evening and use the leftovers to make sandwiches or casseroles.
- Make a big bowl of salad for dinner and take the leftovers for lunch the next day.

Instructors attend foodservice educator's summit

BY ANNETTE BROYLES, Nutrition and Foodservice Instructor

UTTC Nutrition and Foodservice Instructors Annette Broyles and Jill Keith attended the 10th Anniversary Foodservice Educators Network International Summit February 21-23 in Las Vegas, NV. In attendance were foodservice educators from high schools and two and four year institutions from around the country.

The UTTC instructors attended the following Master Classes: Sensory Evaluation, Math Made Easy, Embedding Assessment, Theories of Adult Motivation, The ACFF Accreditation, and What Makes You Think You Are A Good Teacher. An evening reception featured poster presentations that demonstrated and discussed best practices for teaching and learning.

The keynote speaker was Chef Jeff Henderson, an award winning chef, bestselling author and popular public speaker who is also an ex-convict. Henderson's story of finding passion for cooking while incarcerated and turning his life around is described in his New York Times best-seller "COOKED." His story is now being made into a major motion picture.

During a luncheon, participants sampled entrees from ten chefs in the Las Vegas area who were competing in the "Taste of Elegance Competition."

During an exhibitor showcase and educators roundtables, instructors learned about new resources and equipment and about other foodservice educators programs.

"Having the opportunity to learn about teaching practices specific to foodservice educators was great," said Jill Keith, Nutrition and Foodservice Instructor, when discussing the summit. "It was also fun to meet other educators and learn new things to bring back to our students at UTTC."

Nutrition Beach Break

HEALTHY FOODS: Sara Eagle (Standing Rock) a student in Nutrition and Foodservice, serves a choice of healthy foods to students in the UTTC Skill Center. The event was "Nutrition Beach Break," offered during midterm week in early March. The free snacks were: fruit kabobs and tropical fruit punch. Students also had and a chance to win a disc golf disc. The event gave students and staff a refreshing reprieve from winter and an opportunity to toss around a beach ball! The vocation sponsored the event to honor National Nutrition Month.

Cooking for good health

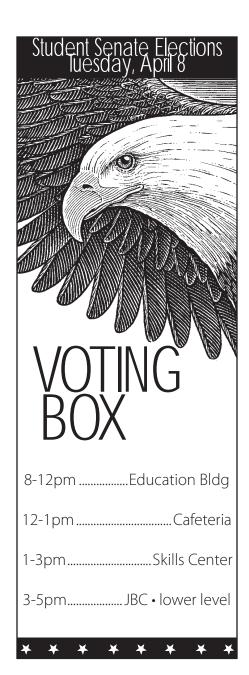

BY SUANN SCHMITZ, LRD Extension Program

UTTC students, faculty and staff attended the first class in a series of cooking classes designed to teach healthy eating. Eating in moderation to control diabetes is the overall concept used in each lesson. Recipes that are used reflect general principles for good diabetes and blood pressure control. They are reduced in fat, sugar, and calories and where possible increased in fiber content. Portion sizes are always emphasized so that the participants recognize that because a food is recommended it is not "free" and should be eaten in limited amounts. Materials and recipes in this program were developed by the Blackfeet Diabetes Program, Browning, Montana.

Next Class will be: Tuesday, April 1 • 6:15 pm Jack Barden • lower level

Please bring your favorite traditional recipe to be modified for lower fat and calorie content.

Smoking and Pregnancy

Put your Baby First!

BY JILL KEITH, LRD

If you smoke, you've probably heard that it is bad for your health. You probably know that smoking causes heart disease, lung cancer, breast cancer, other cancers, and emphysema. Smoking also ages your skin, discolors your teeth, and gives you bad breath.

Women who smoke have many more miscarriages than nonsmokers. Smoking during pregnancy increases the risk of health problems for your baby.

Pregnancy is a perfect time to quit smoking! If you avoid tobacco, you may:

- Make sure your baby is born on time, not early
- Increase your baby's birth weight
- Help baby's lungs grow strong
- Improve baby's overall health
- Save your cigarette money for cute baby clothes
- · Look and smell better without ciga-
- Feel stronger and have more energy
- Live longer, healthier, and happier with your baby

If you continue to smoke while pregnant and after your baby is born, your baby will have a higher risk for ear infections, colds, and lung infections. They will also be able to hold less air in their lungs and are more likely to suffer from Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD). Children of smokers may have an IQ up to 10 points lower than others and are at higher risk for asthma and allergies.

Ask your WIC provider for tips on quitting smoking and how to stay healthy during your pregnancy.

Bortke, Brown honored at AIHEC hoops tipoff

HIGH HONOR: Two well-recognized figures in North Dakota and national athletics were honored March 12 during the opening ceremony of the American Indian Higher Education Consortium basketball tournament in Bismarck. Above in center, Al Bortke was acknowledged for his trust and faith in Indian athletes at the University of Mary during a 30 year career as basketball coach and athletic director. Two of his former players, Tex Hall and Kevin Finley (both Three Affiliated), honored him with eagle feathers, the significance of which was explained to Bortke and his wife Linda by UTTC Counselor Russell Gillette. Right, former Louisiana State University basketball coach Dale Brown was blanketed in a star quilt by Valerie Antelope, Fort Yates, ND. Brown is a motivational speaker and consultant. He was the college coach of Shaquille O'Neil and other NBA players. He had befriended Antelope's father, the late Ambrose Antelope (Standing Rock). Brown was a keynote speaker at AIHEC.

Remembering Two Friends

We have noted with sadness the recent passing of two friends at Three Affiliated Tribes at Fort Berthold. Nathan Hale, a member of the tribal council, who I came to know and respect as a member of the United Tribes board, was very involved in community and church work. And Donald Rush, who grew up at Fort Yates and worked here at United Tribes for five years, was a good friend and role model. We miss them both as they journey on. We send our sincere condolences to their families and friends.

Healing Song for Mother Earth

SPRING EQUINOX: Members of the United Tribes campus community joined with tribal people across the country on the first full day of spring to pray and sing a healing song for Mother Earth. Staff members and students gathered for the ceremony outside the college's Lewis Goodhouse Wellness Center on March 21 at 11 a.m. (Central Time). Tribal people across North America had been alerted by e-mail to participate in what was planned as a world-wide ceremony titled "8,000 Drums." Clan grandmothers of the Huron tribe in Canada had put out a call to Indians everywhere to play the drum, sing, and pray for help in the healing process for the earth and the environment, which is under constant assault. According to the e-mail, the purpose was to fulfill a prophecy of the Otomi people who are Mayan Olmec and Toltec descendants. The UTTC observance was coordinated by counselor Julie Cain.

Congratulations Jarvis and Colette!

Jarvis Bearstail had a great year for the Thunderbirds. He averaged almost 27 points a game and was a First Team all Mon-Dak Conference selection as well as being named to NJCAA Region XIII team and AIHEC MVP. Even though the team had a tough year in the win column and teams concentrated on stopping Jarvis, he led the team in every statistical category except rebounding.

Congratulations to Jarvis on great year!

Keeble awarded Medal of Honor

HEROISM IN KOREAN WAR: Nearly 60 years after he served in battle and more than a quarter century after his death, Woodrow Wilson Keeble was awarded the Medal of Honor. Over 200 people attended a ceremony March 3 in the East Room of the White House, including Keeble's step son, Russell Hawkins (above), and members of Keeble's tribe the Sisseton-Wahpeton Oyate of the Lake Traverse Reservation in South and North Dakota. Three delegations of veterans from Sisseton were there, along with various veterans organizations from the state and national levels, and several veterans who served with Keeble or who fought in the battles in Korea in which he distinguished himself with extraordinary heroism. At right, President George W. Bush presented the medal.
