Tribal Summit to host Pipeline Discussion

The camp near the confluence of the Cannonball and Missouri Rivers conjures a feeling of tribal gatherings of long ago.

United Tribes Planning for Big Powwow Event

BISMARCK (UTN) – Efforts to challenge construction of a section of an oil pipeline, to protect the water resources of the Missouri River and Lake Oahe, are on the agenda for discussion during the United Tribes Tribal Leader's Summit.

The 20th annual gathering of tribal leaders from the Great Plains region and tribes around the country is scheduled for September 6-8 in Bismarck sponsored by United Tribes Technical College.

Standing Rock Tribal Chairman Dave Archambault II and members of the Tribal Council will host a briefing and discussion about issues surrounding the Dakota Access Pipeline on Tuesday, September 6 in Hall A of the Bismarck Event Center from 6:15 to 8:15 p.m.

An injunction filed by the tribe has halted construction on the project. Hundreds of Standing Rock citizens have been joined by many tribal and non-tribal supporters from around the country at an encampment near where the pipeline would cross the Missouri River.

"We stand in solidarity with the peaceful demonstrations and leadership that are founded in prayer," says Leander "Russ" McDonald, United Tribes Technical College president. "Our mission as an educational community within the city of Bismarck is to help our students recognize the importance of tribal sovereignty and leadership. We have an historic learning opportunity taking place right before us."

Discussions at the Tribal Leader's Summit will result in the formation and adoption of resolutions that guide policy-making in the region and throughout the country, says McDonald.

"One of the main purposes of the Tribal Summit is for leaders to arrive at consensus about policies and remedies for issues," McDonald says. "Those raised by the pipeline – such as protection of water resources for all people, preservation of cultural sites, and working fairly and equitably with tribal governments – are vitally important issues in Indian Country and throughout the nation."

The evening pipeline discussion on Sept. 6 hosted by Standing Rock is open to the public at no charge. The public is also invited to an entertainment show featuring Native comedians James and Ernie on Wednesday, Sept. 7 at 5:30 p.m., and to the North Dakota Native American Hall of Honor Induction Ceremony at 5 p.m. on Thursday, Sept. 8 at the North Dakota Heritage Center.

Registration is required to attend events on the summit daytime schedule.

POWWOW TO FOLLOW

The Tribal Leader's Summit precedes the United Tribes Technical College International Powwow, set for September 9-11. Preparations for the powwow are continuing. The 47th annual event promises to be a large celebratory gathering. Representatives of the encampment at Standing Rock have been invited to host information and education booths at the powwow and the summit.

UTTC offers Native American tuition waiver

PACKED HOUSE: New students listen August 19 to a welcome from UTTC President Russ McDonald. College enrollment was up for Fall 2016 due to the Native American tuition waiver.

BISMARCK (UTN) - United Tribes to expose them from the start to a system Technical College is making it easier for Native students to start college. Beginning with the current Fall Semester, UTTC will he says. waive the tuition of Native students who are enrolled members of federally-recognized Eligible are all qualified Native American college students who wish to attend the tribal college in Bismarck. The offering is a one-year pilot program that was approved in the spring by the college's governing board, whose members represent the five tribal nations in North Dakota.

Alternative to Student Loans

"We serve a population that has the lowest annual income averages in the entire United States," says Leander "Russ" McDonald, UTTC President. "These are students from some of the most impoverished areas in the country. And we believe it's our obligation to offer realistic financial assistance to help them get started on a path that will change their lives."

UTTC ended its participation in the federal student loan program in May at the conclusion of the 2015-16 academic year.

McDonald says student loans do not work for families that are without savings accounts or access to credit, or have a low level of financial literacy. It's unconscionable they have little experience with that has the potential for saddling them with sizable debt,

"As a tribal college, it's our mission, first and foremost, to serve the education needs of tribes and tribal people," says McDonald. "To make higher education attainable, we've determined that it's necessary to do the financial piece in ways that do not exclusively rely on student loans."

Apply Early

UTTC's Native Student Tuition Waiver has attracted a great deal of interest for Fall Semester 2016. Those eligible for the one-year trial program are new and current UTTC students. The deadline to submit a completed application was June 30, 2016.

New and stop-out students are required to file a completed admissions application and the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). To be eligible, stop-outs must show satisfactory academic progress and file any appeal paperwork before the deadline. Returning students must meet the same requirements and also be pre-registered for classes.

Helpful Checklist

The UTTC Native Tuition Waiver is based on unmet student financial need. It applies only to tuition and not to other college costs such as housing, books, fees and meals.

The college has placed a helpful checklist of application requirements and a step-bystep application form under the 'APPLY NOW' section of the UTTC website, www. uttc.edu.

Students seeking the waiver who missed the June 30 deadline, can be considered for enrollment as part of the college's regular admissions process and subject to UTTC tuition. The college's Admissions and Financial Aid department determines who has successfully met the application requirements.

Program Duration

UTTC will offer the Native American Tuition Waiver for Spring Semester 2017 and Summer Semester 2017. It will be reviewed by the college in early 2017 to assess its effectiveness in making college accessible for Native students.

Other types of student financial aid are also available to qualifying non-Native students who attend UTTC. Non-Native students number between 10 and 15 percent of the student body.

United Tribes offering new programs

FOUR-YEAR ENVIRONMENTAL SCIENCE/RESEARCH DEGREE APPROVED

BISMARCK (UTN) – United Tribes Technical College is offering four new programs in the fall of 2016, including one new bachelor's degree program.

The Higher Learning Commission (HLC) of Chicago, IL approved UTTC's request to offer a Bachelor of Science Degree in Environmental Science and Research.

The four-year program will be taught at the new Science and Technology Center. The college began conferring bachelor's degrees in 2011 and currently has four baccalaureate programs.

Three other new programs will be offered as two-year, Associate of Applied Science (AAS) degrees: Human and Social Services, Information Processing Specialist, and Information Technology.

Human and Social Services will provide a general education for employment in a variety of social service capacities. The degree plan is designed for graduates who wish to transfer and continue to a baccalaureate degree in social work or a related field.

Computer Information Processing and Information Technology are updated variations of former degree programs at UTTC. Both are among the top 25 AAS degrees in the country in employment projections and salaries.

The additions brings to 20 the number of programs at the college in Bismarck governed by the five tribes located in North Dakota.

Focus on Science Research

UTTC planned for the new bachelor's program by studying the job market for the needs of employers and the interests of potential students.

"There are a number of other tribal colleges in the region that offer BS degrees in Environmental Science," says Lisa Azure, UTTC VP of Academic Affairs. "The question was whether we could offer something different to be able to recruit students and fulfill needs in the communities we serve."

The answer came in the form of research.

"The faculty and students in our current Environmental Science program are doing research at a level that is rarely found in an associate degree program," says Azure. "And that's the unique quality about the UTTC program, and the reason the BS degree at UTTC is referred to 'Environmental Science and Research."

Four-Year Enthusiasm

"Current students are thrilled at the potential for getting a bachelor's degree here," says Jeremy Guinn, chair of the UTTC Environmental Science program. "A high percentage are planning to roll right into the program."

The timeline and schedule of the current environmental science associate degree plan was redesigned in May 2015 to make it more effective for students to finish in two years and "seamlessly enter the BS program," says Guinn. Students who began in fall 2015 or spring 2016 are currently working under the new plan.

"Students transferring into the program will find that many of their courses from other North Dakota colleges are common courses that will transfer easily," he says.

Challenges Ahead

Receiving approval for the Environmental Science and Research bachelor's degree was a big hurdle.

Over the next year comes the challenge of moving students through the transition. Those who graduate in May with an associate degree will have a direct path into the bachelor's program. For transferstudents, the challenge is to assure they have the required courses in the appropriate sequence.

Teaching materials for the upper division courses will be finalized over the summer and into the fall semester as these will be new courses for UTTC.

It's an added workload but the department faculty has been preparing course guides and program reviews for a number of semesters, says Guinn.

"The faculty buy-in for the BS program really moved this forward," says Guinn.
"We're preparing for engaging our students at a new level of learning science concepts.
And that's exciting. We're strategically building our programs for the future."

HCL Action

The HLC's Institutional Actions Council approved UTTC's institutional change request for the BS in Environmental Science and Research at a meeting in early February 2016. Substantial changes are considered only for institutions in good standing. A site visit was not required.

The college was notified in a letter dated February 12, which will be the effective date of the new status as listed in appropriate reports on the HLC's website http://www.hlcommission.org/. The new program will be included in the next scheduled HLC site visit in 2017.

Campus Learning Environment

United Tribes Technical College is a member organization of the American Indian Higher Education Consortium. The college serves Native and non-Native students with culturally-connected post-secondary education and training on-campus and via online courses and classes. The campus community in Bismarck is a family learning environment that offers housing, childhood education services, daycare, security, foodservice, health services, counseling and many student and family activities. LEGENDS Softball Tournament set for September 9-11

BISMARCK (UTN) – The annual United Tribes Technical College (UTTC) LEGENDS Softball Tournament is scheduled for September 9-11 at the Clem Kelly softball complex in Bismarck.

The event attracts teams from around the country and takes place in conjunction with the 47th Annual United Tribes Technical College International Powwow.

This is one of the last tournaments of the summer season where players and spectators can gather and cheer-on their favorite teams. The tourney is open to Native and non-Native players and teams. The public is invited and everyone is welcome.

LEGENDS TOURNAMENT

Last year over 50 teams competed in the LEGENDS Softball Tournament. The 2016 line-up offers eight tournament divisions. Five are for teams on which players need not be Native American: Men's D, Men's Rec 1 and 2, and Men's Rec 3 and 4; and Women's D, and Women's Rec 1, 2 and 3.

The following three divisions are for teams comprised of ALL players who are Native American: Men's Upper, Men's Lower, and Women's.

WHAT TO EXPECT

This year all teams are guaranteed to play three games. A homerun hitting contest for men and women returns to the agenda. And a DJ will again provide music and make announcements throughout the three-day event.

Another feature is the option for teams to purchase one extra home run per game for $10. Funds raised will go toward academic and athletic scholarships for college students attending UTTC.

Individual awards in all divisions include: Most Valuable Player, Best Outfielder and Best Infielder. Team awards will be presented for first, second and third places in all eight divisions.

HALL OF FAME

Four athletes will be inducted into the 2016 LEGENDS Hall of Fame: Margaret Gates and the late William (Bill) Helper, both of Standing Rock, and Mike and Jody LaFontaine, both of the Sisseton-Wahpeton Oyate.

GET INVOLVED

The LEGENDS Softball Tournament is a regional event open to all. Participants need not be Native American to play. The event promotes fair play, equality, community involvement and inclusiveness.

The deadline to register is 12 noon on September 1st. Please contact Steve Shepherd: 701-226-3987, sshepherd@uttc.edu or go to http://softball.uttc.edu/.

Graduates Honored at United Tribes Technical College

Brad Hawk

BISMARCK (UTN) – Nerds of the world, if you keep on learning, your time to shine comes eventually.

That was the message to graduates of United Tribes Technical College May 13 during the tribal college's spring commencement ceremony.

"There are benefits to being a nerd; I've figured that out now," said commencement speaker Brad Hawk, the Indian Health Systems Administrator for the North Dakota Indian Affairs Commission in Bismarck. "I'm always learning."

Before joining North Dakota state government, Hawk worked at UTTC for over a decade, raising funds for student scholarships and college support.

He grew up on the Crow Creek Nation at Fort Thompson, SD, with 12 brothers and sisters and a large extended family with members who always worked, including his parents who had full time jobs.

"They also believed in education, pushed me to be educated; and they were supportive," he told an audience of 300 in UTTC's James Henry Community Gymnasium.

Hawk said he was fortunate to have a family like that, and to grow up with friends that didn't get into trouble. They called themselves the 'Geek Squad.' Years later it's sort of a 'Revenge of the Nerds' to have success in life, he said.

Hawk earned a bachelor's degree in health administration from the University of South Dakota and a master's degree in business administration from University of Mary.

The one thing I love about this college, Hawk said of UTTC, is that it's a learning community where students and their families are supported with services that help you succeed. "Challenges are everywhere and you have to be ready for them."

He told the graduates they could adopt his motto as a theme for their lives: "Rise above challenges."

He congratulated the class of 2016, saying: "You've put in all the hard work, sacrifice and dedication. Remember that learning doesn't stop now. Be prepared to keep learning and strive always to achieve your goals."

Academic Year End

The college academic year concluded with the commencement ceremony. The graduating class of 2016 represented 12 different tribal nations. Nine earned Bachelor of Science degrees, 29 Associate of Applied Science degrees, and 11 Certificates of Completion.

In addition to family members and friends, the event was attended by tribal leaders on the college's governing board, representing the tribes of North Dakota: Three Affiliated Tribes of the Mandan/Hidatsa/Arikara Nation, Sisseton-Wahpeton Oyate, Spirit Lake Tribe, Standing Rock Tribe, and Turtle Mountain Band of Chippewa.

The drum group Wise Spirit rendered ceremonial and honor songs, and a traditional meal followed. Earlier in the day, a special ceremony was conducted for three graduates of the college's Practical Nursing program.

Honors were conferred on individual students during a student awards event May 12 that included academic and athletic awards, along with staff and faculty recognitions.

UTTC students, coaches experience AIHEC Conference

By Brian Palecek, UTTC English/Humanities Instructor

More than 1,100 participants from 34 tribal colleges gathered in Minneapolis at the Minneapolis Convention Center for the 2016 AIHEC Student Conference. This was the largest number of attendees ever in the long history of the conference. Seventeen UTTC students attended and engaged in various competitions, both academic and athletic. The group attended keynote speeches, the poetry slam, a banquet, workshops, visited booths, and explored the city, including the Mall of America. The conference started Sunday, March 13 and concluded with the evening awards banquet on Wednesday, March 16.

The competition at AIHEC was more challenging than any other in conference history because of the record-setting number of attendees. UTTC students stepped up to the challenge and placed in more competitions and finished higher than in years past:

Liz White (Standing Rock) & Jayde Bettelyoun (Oglala Lakota) 1st Critical Inquiry

Dawn Alkhafaji (Turtle Mountain) 3rd Science Oral Presentation

Davine Gilbert 3rd Division 1 (Textiles) Amira Gunn 2nd Division 2 (Jewelry) Amira Gunn People's Choice (Digital Design)

NOTWORTHY

Students had strong finishes in two other competitions, even though they didn't receive awards. Mandi Hairy Shirt finished 5th out of 35 competitors in Informative Speech and the Hand Games team finished in 6th place out of 24.

UTTC's Kimberlee Blevins ended her term as Historian for AIHEC Student Government and as Miss AIHEC 2015. Ms. Blevins crowned Tada Vargas (Oglala Lakota College) as the incoming Miss AIHEC 2016 during the Awards Banquet.

REFLECTIONS

UTTC students and coaches traveled home by bus. During the long ride home, through the snow and rain, each student was interviewed and asked to reflect on his or her experiences. The following are highlights from the students' perspectives:

"Bonding with other students and our own team in the Hand Games."

"Karen Diver's keynote speech. Her life story was inspiring."

"Knowledge Bowl was a new experience, being in a competition like that and meeting new people."

"The comedy group 1491. They made light of things that are not normally talked

"The Hand Games. People really got into it, cheering each other on. I was amazed how long it could go on."

"The banquet awards ceremony. The two top Hand Game winning teams showed seriousness and sportsmanship."

"Meeting all the new people, both from UTTC and the other schools. Normally I am in my own little world."

"Competing and winning in Critical Inquiry. Mike Wetsch (UTTC Criminal Justice), our coach, calmed us down and really supported us. What he did was even more important than us winning."

"Meeting people from other schools, getting to know the UTTC students."

"The archery was fun not just

UTTC students in the Parade of Colleges during the AIHEC opening session competitive, I met new people."

"The Hand Games brought us together and blended with other schools. We were bonded in a new way."

"Networking, Karen Diver's keynote, meeting new Native American people to look up to"

"I felt younger than most of the other students, also came close to being mugged in the street, but one of the high points was the entry of all the students on opening day."

"The experience of Knowledge Bowl and playing Hand Games was the best experience. Not knowing what material to remember was tough but a great challenge. I loved it and would love to attempt it again."

HAND GAMES

The Hand Games competition was enjoyed by all of the students and coaches. Some students were on the front lines, as players in the games. Others and the coaches stood behind the team, supporting their teammates by moving their hands and arms to the beat of the drums or waving scarves to distract the opposing team. Considering that more than half the team learned the game within three weeks of the competition, and some had never played before, their success and sense of camaraderie was remarkable. Many said that the Hand Games tournament was one of the most memorable events of the entire conference.

Mandi Hairy Shirt expressed the feeling when she wrote: "Why were the hand games such a big deal? I believe it was because even though we all are attending UTTC, we are all in different programs so none of us have ever really talked. When we did Hand Games, and we were winning, it brought us together and helped us support each other. It showed we could be united even though we were in different classes and programs. It brought good laughter because we didn't think we could make it to the final six. It allowed us to develop friendships we didn't have when we left home."

UTTC Student of the Year: Joshua Chavez

Joshua Chavez

BISMARCK (UTN) – Joshua Chavez is the American Indian College Fund "Student of the Year" for United Tribes Technical College.

Chavez is from the Northern Arapaho Tribe in WY. He was on the UTTC President's List for Fall Semester 2015 and Spring Semester 2016.

He's a member of All Nations Assembly of God Church in Bismarck and a regular volunteer for clean-up, social gatherings and events at the church that meets on the UTTC campus.

He was involved as a volunteer with the Northern Arapaho Council of Elders language revitalization program back home and with the tribe's youth program.

Chavez said his educational goal at UTTC was to graduate with a certificate in welding, which he did on May 13.

"My objective was to work hard and make the President's List," he says. "I feel this is a high honor that will open more opportunities for me in the workforce."

Chavez believes that completing his educational goal is an example for young people on the reservation.

"There isn't a lot of opportunity in the Native community and higher education is limited," he wrote in an essay for the College Fund award. "I believe that knowledge is power. As long as you are willing to dedicate yourself to attaining it, with time, effort and hard work, it is possible."

"My younger siblings look up to me and by graduating and continuing to live a healthy lifestyle, I know I will inspire them to follow my lead," he says.

Chavez is the son of Teresa Hughes-His Chase, a UTTC graduate, Gipp Fellowship recipient, and former UTTC staff member who now works for Arapahoe School District #38 on the Wind River Reservation.

About his future, Chavez believes that job opportunities in North Dakota are endless. "My goal is to be employed in the Bakken Shale region so I can gain experience necessary to further my career as a certified welder."

"I would like to be an independent contractor for oil companies and eventually own my own welding company," he says.

Chavez was selected for the $1,000 scholarship from among students nominated by each UTTC academic department. Applicants were ranked based on GPA, community involvement and career goals.

Chavez expressed his thanks and appreciation to the College Fund. "This will help pay for my tuition, books, fees and living expenses as I work to accomplish my educational goals," he said. "Thank you wholeheartedly. I'm truly humbled, blessed and thankful."

News reporting is storytelling

Former TV network correspondent visits UTTC

By Alicia Hegland-Thorpe, United Tribes News

Hattie Kauffman

In the early 70's, Hattie Kauffman was a 17 year-old college freshman ready to change the world. She had ideas to explore, people to meet and stories to tell. But she didn't

But she didn't know how to get started.

When she was a youngster, her family left their home Nez Perce reservation in Idaho. She and six other siblings grew up alone, without electricity and many times without water, in Seattle Public Housing projects.

"When you have alcoholic parents, bills tend to not get paid," she told a group March 10 at United Tribes Technical College.

But she learned to survive, and she believes it was those "survival skills" that enabled her become successful as a reporter.

"When you have alcoholic parents, bills tend to not get paid"

Would-be Drop-Out

Kauffman is a media icon and role model in Indian Country. She spent 40 years in television news and holds the distinction of being the first Native American to report a news story on one of the major TV networks.

Now, in a book and on the speaking circuit, she intertwines her experiences in broadcast news with her personal life, telling of lessons learned over the years.

Kauffman says she considered dropping out of high school. But a Native community leader convinced her otherwise, saying, "Hattie we don't need more Indian dropouts, we need more Indian graduates."

Kauffman attend the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis because she followed one of her sisters there. At the time, the American Indian Movement was making headlines. She recounted that during a meeting of the American Indian Student Association, a radio producer asked if anyone might be interested in reporting "Indian news" on the college station

When nobody raised a hand, she did. She was on the air the next day. And her reporting led to a scholarship and a job on WCCO Radio, the popular Twin Cities CBS affiliate.

TV News

Though her broadcasting career started in radio, like many, her career path turned to television news reporting. She started in TV at KING 5 News in Seattle, where she won four Emmy awards. She became a network TV news correspondent and substitute anchor for ABC's Good Morning America and later worked at CBS. Her reports were carried on many nationally televised programs, including 48 Hours, Street Stories, CBS Sunday Morning, CBS Radio, CBS Special Reports, the Early Show, and the CBS Evening News.

Story Telling

Kauffman says that Native Americans are, by nature, story tellers. Before retiring in 2012, she covered a wide range of stories from volcano eruptions, plane crashes, and presidential elections, to red carpet galas and backstage interviews with Hollywood stars.

Now, she spends her retirement traveling, speaking and attending book signings. She also paints. Her book is titled "Falling Into Place."

City of Bismarck Welcomes UTTC Leaders Summit and 47th International Powwow

BISMARCK, N.D. – Bismarck Mayor Mike Seminary extends a warm welcome to all who attend the 20th annual Tribal Leader's Summit in Bismarck September 6-8, and the 47th Annual United Tribes Technical College (UTTC) Powwow, Sept. 9-11, sponsored by United Tribes Technical College, including all who are visiting the area asking for their voices to be heard.

"It is an honor to host this annual cultural event that brings a richness of culture, diversity and economic benefit to our community," said Mayor Seminary. "Many people aren't aware of how important the Tribal Leader's Summit and International Powwow are to our community." These events bring about 20,000 people to the community each year who shop, dine, camp and utilize local amenities that contribute to our local economy.

"We are very gratified that United Tribes Technical College hosts this premier ethnic event in our community each year, celebrating the diversity of the area. It is one of the most amazing and moving experiences I've ever been a part of," said Mayor Seminary. "The City of Bismarck has a very profound relationship with UTTC and a deep respect for the cultural exchange and all they bring to our community. We will continue to build upon the strength of this relationship."

The powwow has become one of the premier cultural events of North Dakota, receiving numerous awards over the years. A study of the college's economic impact shows that the summit and powwow bring approximately $1.8 million to the local economy in direct expenditures; United Tribes Technical College total direct impact on the local economy contributed approximately $32 million in 2010.
